Dear Hiring Team,

I'm applying for the software engineering role in your Data and Technology team. Python is my main language, and I am good at spotting slow, manual processes and replacing them with small tools that clear the bottleneck, which seems to be most of what this job is about.

I came to software through a conversion masters after a music degree and several years teaching, so working out what non technical people actually need and explaining things without the jargon is familiar to me. I'm comfortable with APIs, databases and Git, I have a realistic sense of where LLMs help and where they don't, and I'd welcome the chance to talk it through.

Best regards,
Casey
